

Drew G. I. Hart is a public theologian and professor of theology at Messiah University in Pennsylvania. He has 10 years of pastoral ministry experience and has worked for an afterschool program in the city for middle school boys. In addition to teaching, he provides anti-racism and faith-based justice talks and workshops across the country and collaborates with local faith-rooted organizers, activists, and leaders in Harrisburg.

His book, Trouble I've Seen: Changing the Way the Church Views Racism, utilizes everyday stories, Jesus-shaped lessons, and anti-racism frameworks to transform the church's understanding and social witness. His newest book, Who Will Be a Witness?: Igniting Activism for God's Justice, Love, and Deliverance calls the church to action, offering a way forward that is deeply rooted in the nonviolent liberation of Jesus Christ. This discipleship resource unveils the church's past failures & offers an ecclesial path toward meaningful grassroots social change. His writing can be found in Sojourners, The Christian Century, Red Letter Christians, and The Mennonite, among other places, and Dr. Hart speaks regularly at colleges, conferences, and churches throughout North America.

Drew also serves as a co-host for the Inverse Podcast, along with Australian peace activist Jarrod Mckenna. Together they interview interesting guests from around the world and explore how liberative readings of scripture can subvert the status quo and invite us to turn our world upside-down.

Dr. Drew Hart was the recipient of bcmPEACE's 2017 Peacemaker Award and was honored locally with the 2019 W.E.B. Du Bois Award. He was also chosen as Elizabethtown College's 2019 Peace Fellow. Drew and his family live in Harrisburg, PA.
